DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

This vertical plank constructed, farmhouse is situated at the intersection of Old Route 40 and Rt. 546 and faces south. It is a three by one bay, two story structure with a gable roof, and an ell addition. A single story shed addition extends from the east side of the ell. A facade porch, supported by six plain square wooden posts, covers the three bays. A porch also runs across the back, north elevation, to the shed addition.

A cinderblock gable end chimney is located on the west elevation. Two over two sash windows light the first story with single pane windows on the second story. The house rests on a stone foundation with a cellar entrance on the east elevation. Aside from the central facade entrance, there is an entrance on the rear shed addition. The house is covered with asphalt shingles. The roofs of both the main structure and the shed addition are covered with corrugated metal. The roof of the ell is covered with asphalt shingles.
